The Kentucky Election. The returns indicate the election of Leslie Coombs, the Bell-Everett pandidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals—the only State office pending-by a large majority. As the Douglas leaders have urged their party to vote for Coombs, to make a showing against Breckinridge, we suppose they will claim it as a victory over him; but inasmuch as it will take a coalition on the Electoral Ticket to carry the State against Breckinridgeeven if that would, which we regard as by no means certain-it is difficult to see any practical value in this victory to Douglas.

Population of Ohio-Diminution of its Rate

It is stated that the census returns from Ohio show an increase in the population of the State of only 300,000 since the census of 1850, which, if true, fixes the present number of inhabitants at 2,280,329—considerably less than the current estimates. This makes the ratio of the last decennial increase a fraction over fifteen per cent, while the ratio of the preceding one was over thirty, and of the one before that over sixty per cent.

This is under the ratio of natural increase as it has heretofore been estimated in the United States, and would seem to show that Ohio has lost, within the last ten years, more than she has gained by emigration. This although it will surprise some, might have been anticipated. The drafts upon Ohio for the peopling of other regions have been large. California and the other gold localities, Kansas and the other new Territories, have had their full share of our population, while currents of Eastern agricultural immigration, passing by many rich and desirable sections of Ohio, have, under the influence grow rich. of that love of enterprise and adventure which is so conspicuous in the American character, tended to points far beyond our

There is another reason which, in this connection, is worthy to be remembered. Ohio, as we have had occasion before to remark, is an exceedingly well taxed part of the creation. A population of two millions and a quarter pays from eight to nine millions of dollars annually in general and local taxes. This money, of which it may be said that, excepting the considerable sum sent abroad for the payment of interest upon the foreign debts, that it does not go out of the State, and is therefore no diminution of the aggregate wealth, is nevertheless drawn from the people and retained in such a way as to constitute a heavy burden upon industry, and a strong motive to avoid a location when government is so expensive and extravagant. It is a motive that operates the most vigorously upon those who make up the masses of the people-those whose hands create the wealth, nd upon whom, in the end, it devolves to find the means to pay these vast sums which, through whatever channels they may pass never return to them again. People are learning to shun the highly taxed communities. The check which the exorbitant taxation of Cincinnati presents, without doubt, exhausts more than half the populative energy of the city, and there is no reason to doubt that similar causes operating throughout the State, have been productive of similar effects.

Migration to New Party Territories a Com-mon Right.

Mr. Charles Reemelin, who is to appearance the leading spirit of the Breckinridge for the last ten years, showing a loss of 69, party in this vicinity, seems to have taken as 000,000 pounds by outting off the slave-trade, a personal insult, at the Carthage Saturday last, the inquiry as to the time when he left the Republican party, and, as is shown by the reports, indulged in remarks not complimentary to the private character of the inquirer. Mr. Reemelin must have been fully aware that the same question would suggest itself to thousands of others who might see his name in connection with the proceedings of the meeting; and it would, perhaps, have been better for his reputation for consistency to have gone to Carthage prepared not merely to fix the time when he left the Republican party, but to describe the intellectual or moral processes by means of which a pretty active Republican of 1856 becomes the local leader of the extreme

Southern party in 1860. We are no sticklers for the doctrine that men are bound by their party antecedents. We hold that what a man sincerely believes to-day should constitute his rule of political action to-day, without regard to what he may have thought at any previous period; but there is such a thing as a violent transition, and when it occurs, there will b more or less curlosity on the part of the people to come at the causes by which it has been produced. Psychological facts and phenomena, especially when they transcend what is given in common experience, are always subjects of interest to mankind; and it is not easy to imagine phenomena mo heteroclite and anomalous than are exhibited in the migration of several of our antialayery fellow-citizens from the ranks of the Republican to those of the Breckinridge party, as recently witnessed.

We are not making complaints—nor ques-tioning the right of free migration to any of the party Territories now or hereafter to be organized, by any American citizen-no proposing to undervalue any gentleman for his one, two or twenty removals, more or less; but simply enlarging slightly upon the idea that when a man has done that politically which appears to the public mind extravagant, his better way is to seize upon the first favorable opportunity, and-if he has any reasons to give-explain himself.

THE Zounves did not arrive yesterday their appearance is now announced for Wednesday; consequently, some of our citizen soldiery were encased in broadcloth and in those cotton phylactories which help so much to give them a bold front, to little purpose; and, with the mercury at 90°, broadcloth and breastworks are no joke. In the mean time, in spite of the Commercial's charge of "inexplicability" against the Guthrie Grays, and more especially in spite of the Enquirer's unique defense of them, our citizens are too well acquainted with the generous manner in which the Grays have represented the willitary hospitality of this city on former occasions to suppose that they will be de-

Human Rights Tried by the Sugar Test. The anti-slavery men seem to have a cepted the relative product of sugar in the West India Islands as the test of the negro's right to freedom; hence their chief energies are devoted to the arrangement and manipulation of the statistics of the sugar export to show that the African will produce more sugar in a state of freedom than in slavery, and therefore ought to be free: i. c. the chief end of the colored man is sugar, and his inalienable right depends on the condition in which he will produce the most sugar for ex-

Statistics can be manipulated so as to show any result that is required, by taking only such facts as serve the main purpose and omitting the rest. We have referred to the West India emancipation question in a previous article, and to the circumstances and facts directly affecting the supply of labor in some islands, which were left out of statistical statements made up to show the economical advantages of freedom.

Thus, in some of the islands, large supplies of Coolie laborers have been received. In Barbadoes every acre of ground was under cultivation, and the negroes had to work or starve, and the number of them in Barbadoe made wages very low. In these Islands the sugar product has been maintained, and in Barbadoes actually increased. All this is set down in the anti-slavery statistics to the credit of emancipation. This of course establishes its benefit. But is the diminishing product of sugar in Jamaics, and abando ment of cultivated land to original bush, set down to the disadvantage of emancipation? By no means. That is ascribed to something else: thus we hear from these anti-slavery sources that the Jamaica planters are entirely different from the same race on the other Islands; they seem to know nothing of their own interest-a fault which the British, and their descendants in this coun try, have not usually been accused of. We are to suppose from the statements that they let their estates grow up to bush, and themselves grow down to ruin, rather than pay free-labor fair wages and export sugar and

The Methodiet Quarterly Review has an article on this subject, showing the benefits of emancipation by the economical results. This shows by statistics that the sugar export of Jamaica was regularly decreasing during slavery, and that the decrease under emancipation was only a continuation of some cause which had struck the sugar business with death without any reference to slavery. It is a fact that the sugar export was regularly diminishing under slavery; but in all the statistical statements made for emancipation purposes, the previous years, during which the African slave existed, and the sugar product rapidly increased, are left out, as well as the coincident circumstance which would have made the whole matter clear. The slave-trade is necessary to develop the sugar producing capacity to its fullest extent. Of course, under the anti-slavery theory, which makes sugar the test of the right to freedom, this proves the slave-trade to be right and necessary.

While the African slave-trade was open and protected by British law, the export of sugar from Jamaica rapidly increased. From 1772 to 1775 the average annual export was 123,979,700 pounds; but it increased regularly, with only such variations as are easily ac counted for by the casualties to which this crop is subject; and from 1805 to 1808, the last three years of the British slave-trade. the average export of sugar was about 322,-000,000 pounds. The period of slavery without the slave-trade was from 1809 to 1832, during which the number of slaves diminished considerably, and the sugar export decreased to an average of 153,760,431 pounds and clearly establishing the right of the slave-trade by the sugar abolition theory. From 1832 to 1836 was the period of apprenticeship, to qualify the negro race for freedom, during which the annual export of sugar decreased to 75,990,950 pounds, showing that just in proportion as you let up the pressure on Sambo you lose sugar. Then began the trial of freedom and sugar, and the export went down, till in 1359 it amounted to but 48,039,600 pounds, proving conclusively by the anti-slavery sugar test that negro freedom is a failure.

It is rather singular that, although the Northern States are supposed to be filled with anti-slavery men, we can find none that dare look the consequences of negro freedom square in the face, and stand to them. None of them take the broad ground that the negro has a right to be free and to be a negro, too, following the custom of his ancestors, with no wants beyon what the spontaneous fruits supply, and allowing tropical countries, which are cultivated only by her forced labor, to go back to wilderness; but they argue that he should be free because he will be such a good boy, and will make more sugar. Tried by this test, emancipation must fall, as well as the laws prohibiting the slave-trade. The planters of British Guiana say that with an unrestricted supply of Coolie labor, a hundred millions of ogsheads of sugar can be produced on that nat. If we carry this augar anti-slavery principle to its logical results, and open the African slave-trade, and follow our manifest destiny southward-all of which legitimately follows the same sugar anti-slavery principl -we may export sugar enough to sweete

As this is a subject which has been much discussed, and on which vast quantities of statistics have been arranged, we append the following statistical statement of the annual exports, and average annual exports, pounds of sugar from Jamiaca, in the periods stated, compiled from authentic sources which we have used in this article:

Pelitical News.

Syracuse, August 6.— Delegates to the Breckinridge and Lane State Convention, which meets here to-morrow, are arriving freely, and there is no doubt that every Assembly District in the State will be represented. There will be but one organization, and the Convention will be called to order by John A. Green, jr., Chairman of the National Democratic State Convention.

It is supposed that a full State and Electoral Ticket will be nominated, and that no fusion will take place. Resolutions are prepared indorsing Breckinridge and Lane and the platform adopted at the Maryland Institute. Political News.

ing. Ed. Croswell remained over at Albany and will not be at Syracuse in consequence of indifferent health. He is said to favor a compromise and union.

The organization, of which John A. Green is at the head, appears to be the one generally recognized by the delegates as regular. Schell, it is thought, will not make any great opposition to it, as many delegates from New York city give in allegiance to Green. It appears certain that a straight ticket, both State and electoral, will be made, but there is some effort among a few delegates for a postponement for the purpose of effecting a compromise.
